

HINDENBURG BLOCKED IN WILD DASH TOWARD YPRES

Hindenburg's sweep toward Ypres from the south has been checked temporarily at least, by the wall of human bodies composed of the British and French. The whole north portion of the Flanders battle front from the Lys river to the Ypres canal is ablaze with desperate fighting but the enemy advance after a prolonged struggle which carried them from the hills down on the low land, has been held at a point southwest of Voormezelle. This village is less than two miles south of Ypres, on the western edge of the two highways from Ypres to Wychatete. It is one half mile west of the Ypres canal.

In Picardy, the Franco-British forces not only continued to block thrusts toward Amiens, but are improving their positions by counter attacks. Haig said more than 900 German prisoners were taken in the region of Hangard-En-Santerre and Villers-Bretonneux yesterday afternoon and evening.

The British navy has been active again, this time in the Adriatic. The Admiralty reported that two British destroyers engaged five Austrian destroyers in a battle, but the Austrian fled to Durazzo, a naval base, and were pursued by the British. The pursuit was later joined by two French and five other British destroyers. The following day British airmen raided Durazzo in an attempt to destroy the sea plane base there. The attack is said to have been "apparently successful".

By William Philip Simms
With the British armies in Flanders, April 27—There is a comparative calm on the Flanders front following the tempestuous three days of fighting but the fighting may start again at any moment.

Field Marshal Hindenburg has brought General Seiger up from the Verdun region to help around Kemmel. Under him are five divisions, 60,000 men. General Von Eberhard with another five divisions is at his left. Together these ten divisions hammered away yesterday, making only slight headway after the capture of Kemmel. Seiger tried to advance toward Ypres, astride the Ypres canal yesterday, but the British countered brilliantly retaking lost ground and establishing strong posts. Von Eberhard's skilled men hurried out of Branoutre four times were unable to push on after occupying the place. Likewise they were too exhausted after taking Kemmel to succeed in turning Mt. Scherpenberg. Throughout the Ypres front the Germans thundered ceaselessly. Local fighting keeps up everywhere. The weather continued threatening. The ground is unusually dry.

(By United Press)

Bulletin, London, April 27—"The enemy is held everywhere." Field Marshal Haig announced today. "On the whole front north of Lys the fighting yesterday was of the severest character. Repeated enemy attempts to develop their advantage or the previous day failed. Following many hours of fluctuating battle the enemy's advance was blocked with heavy casualties to them. From Loire to the enemy's assault against the French positions were pressed back with extreme violence. After three attacks were beaten off with great loss the Germans have succeeded in carrying a small village. In the evening the allies counter attacked and drove the enemy out of the village which is now held by the French. At other points in the evening the enemy was repulsed. North of Kemmel Wood and in the neighborhood of Voormezelle after a prolonged and fierce struggle, the positions remained ours. In the ridge and village southwest of Voormezelle the enemy again heavily attacked, but were completely repulsed. We took hundreds of prisoners. Local fighting on the Lys front in the neighborhood of Givenchy yesterday afternoon won us 40 prisoners. South of the Somme in the afternoon and evening we obtained advantage in the Hangard-En-Santerre and Villers-Bretonneux section. Our prisoners here total more than 900. Along the Hangard-Bretonneux line we advanced our positions at certain points. Hostile attacks at night were broken up and failed to develop.

Dr. L. R. Browne returned this morning from the State dental meeting at Wilkes-Barre.

FIVE AUSTRIAN DESTROYERS

(By United Press)

London—Two British destroyers defeated five Austrian destroyers in the Adriatic, the British admiralty announced today. "Two of our destroyers in the Adriatic engaged five Austrian destroyers," the report stated. The enemy fled to Durazzo for shelter. Five more British and two French destroyers joined in the pursuit toward Durazzo which continued until after midnight on Monday. Our casualties were seven killed and 19 wounded. British air force raided the seaplane base at Durazzo Tuesday and apparently were successful.

BOARDMAN MINER
TERRIBLY INJURED

John Slith, an Austrian, employee in the mines at Boardman, was terribly injured in an explosion yesterday afternoon. He had both hands blown off, both eyes knocked out and his nose blown off.

Slith was given first aid treatment when he was removed from the mine and was then strapped on a cot, placed in an automobile and rushed to the Clearfield hospital, arriving here about 5:30 last evening.

Despite the terrible nature of his injuries the man was conscious and able to talk this morning but it is not thought possible that he has any chance for recovery.

THANKS

The Committee in charge of the Women's parade wish to thank each and every one who participated including all who gave their time in making arrangements, leaders of sections, aides and those who marched in the ranks; each woman individually as well as the children of the schools who cooperated with us, helped to make the undertaking an over-whelming success.

The presence of four of our soldier boys, Lawshe Dorr, Fred Lippert, George Torrence and Wallace Negle, of Philadelphia gave a fine military touch to the parade.

SOME JURY!

(By United Press)

New York, April 27—After having been out since 11 P. M. Thursday, the jury in the trial of Max Eastman and other editors of "The Masses" accused of interfering with the draft, was excused today when it could not agree on a verdict.

PARADE NOTES

Some job to ride a dozen squares with right arm uplifted but "Liberty" did the trick and brought forth hearty applause.

Any woman who was not in the parade surely had a cork limb. This statement is not qualified but the fact is evident from the few who lined the sidewalks.

Can the women pull off something big? Well we should say so!

That circus parade on Tuesday will look like some "piker" since we saw the one last evening.

In keeping their husbands in line in the performance of family duties the women have good experience to draw from in keeping step themselves.

The old fashioned "hayfoot" "strawfoot" gave way to "cornfoot" "unionfoot".

Drug stores report a rushing business in "Blue Jay" corn plasters this morning.

We saw one fellow finding fault with the parade formation. The jealous he-cat.

While we watched the patriotic demonstration with bated breath, we have it on the very best of authority here wasn't a "bated breath" in the entire line-up.

The "Captains of the parade" shed no "light of other days" around us when they appeared in those native blue uniforms of the old Fifth Regiment of Spanish War days.

The Liberty Bond float was a happy thought and elicited much favorable comment along the line of March.

The "Admiral of the Navy League" appeared like a real mariner and the bevy of pretty girls bringing up the rear of this section paid one of our valiant allies a deserved compliment in carrying a handsome Italian flag.

The "Liberty bell" was fetchingly named and rang out with no uncertain notes.

The teaching corps—those drillmasters who get the first opportunity to teach young America's idea to shoot—came in for generous recognition along the line of march.

One ceased to wonder at the enormous amount of work turned out by the local Red Cross chapter when he saw that fine appearing line up of quiet, capable workers in the ranks of that section.

The only thing lacking in the whole affair was a card announcing the fact that the leading automobile contained the children of those fathers from our community who put aside family cares and responsibilities when their country called them to the colors. Those kiddos deserved the plaudits they would have received had it been generally known who they were.

"Some band," was the slang phrase heard on every hand last evening in discussing the Tyrone band. The Tyrone band, which is a Pennsylvania Railroad institution, is a high class organization and added greatly to their already fine reputation by their magnificent music last evening. They were not a bit stingy with their music either, as following the parade they gave a short concert on the Court House corner to an audience of several thousand people and later adjourned to the lobby of The Danforth where they gave a delightful program. Mr. Miller, the soloist accompanying the band, is a noted vocalist, and his admirable singing added greatly to the enjoyment of the large audience.

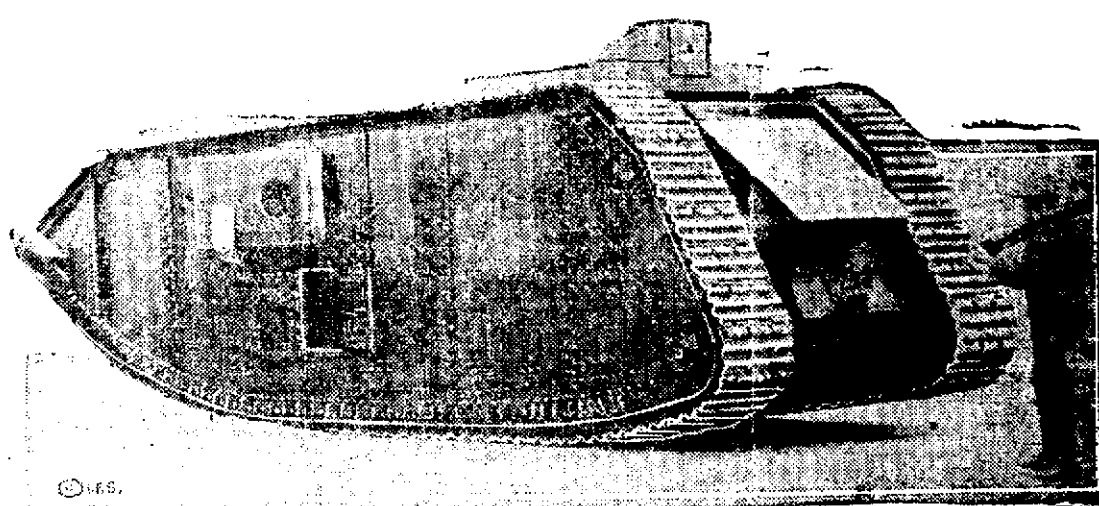

Samuel B. Hare's stories of Belgian atrocities in Belgium made a deep and lasting impression on his hearers.

Washington League's brand of patriotism is of the kind and character which made this great and glorious country what it is today.

Junior Chautauqua play at the High School auditorium at 7:30 this evening. You will miss a rare treat if you fail to attend. Price 10c.

C. M. Shaw and wife drove through from Pittsburgh to Clearfield arriving here yesterday in an Empire car purchased for Guy V. Shaw of West Fifth avenue.

Paris, April 27—"If the Allies cannot break the Germans they can beat them and victory will come to the entente thru the air," General Verraux declared today. In reviewing the possibilities of two practically evenly balanced armies being able to break through the lines by force of arms, General Verraux declared that supremacy must come through the air. "The armies must place their hope in the air men. The victory which Germany believes always lies just beyond her grasp has been snatched away by the French, British, Italian, and American air men. With our air squadrons we have shattered traditions of former wars—we have broken the military foundation of other wars—that strategy wins battles. We cannot break through the enemy's line—we can reach them as proven in recent battles."

School Children Make Elegant Appearance In Great Parade Held There Yesterday

TOWN INTENSELY PATRIOTIC

Curwensville, April 27—The public schools branch of the Woman's Third Liberty Loan committee gave Curwensville an opportunity of demonstrating anew its patriotism last evening on the occasion of the Liberty Day parade. More than eight hundred school children joined with the mothers and wives of the soldiers in the service and war working organizations in making the greatest display ever seen in this patriotic old town.

The parade was formed at the High School building, the South Side schools, headed by Master Billy McClure on a pony, and the Locust street school headed by Murray Clark and James Holton, also mounted, marched to the starting point where they were merged and reformed with the high school pupils, headed by three cornets, and the line of parade taken up. The ponies ridden by the leaders were tastefully decorated with the national colors, while each marcher carried a small American flag.

The feature of the parade was the section devoted to the wives and mothers of the boys in the service each carrying a service flag denoting the number in the service. The members of the woman's Third Liberty Loan committee followed.

The Crescent and Keystone bands furnished the music the occasion.

When the parade passed along the streets the crowds which packed the sidewalk were thrown into a frenzy of patriotism by the Liberty Loan songs, and the inscription on the banners carried when told the story of the activities of the paraders and solicited the help of all loyal Americans.

The banner of 1st, 4th and 5th grades of the Locust street school denoting that these little people had purchased a total of $1407.84 in War Savings stamps certainly caught the crowd and evoked storms of applause. The enthusiastic organization of the teachers of the Locust street and South Side schools proved its effectiveness.

"Second Line of Defense" A Virile Force in Bucking Up Sentiment for Activities of War

HERE MAN WAS OUTSHOWN

Well, Liberty Day has come and gone and every loyal, patriotic Clearfielder certainly has reason to be proud of the community in which he lives and the ladies (God bless them) of his community. The ladies of old Clearfield can always be depended upon in any crisis or in any movement for the public welfare as has been demonstrated times without number in the past, and will continue to be in the future as long as Clearfield exists. Last night's Liberty parade was a shining example of the steadfastness and loyalty of the women of the land. It was a living, moving, inspiring picture of the demonstration of American patriotism and love of liberty. In what other cause could you have secured such a turnout of women, yet how natural it was to find the women of Clearfield, who have already made so many sacrifices for the boys at the front, marching in serried ranks to attest outwardly and before the world their love of country and willingness to make even greater sacrifices for the success of the American boys "over there" and the final triumph of democracy and right.

Last night's demonstration was in the hands of the women exclusively and that those hands were energetic and capable was proven by the magnificent spectacle presented by the inspiring pageant as it passed down Second street to Broad, thence to Third and up Third to Market and to the High school auditorium where the speechmaking took place.

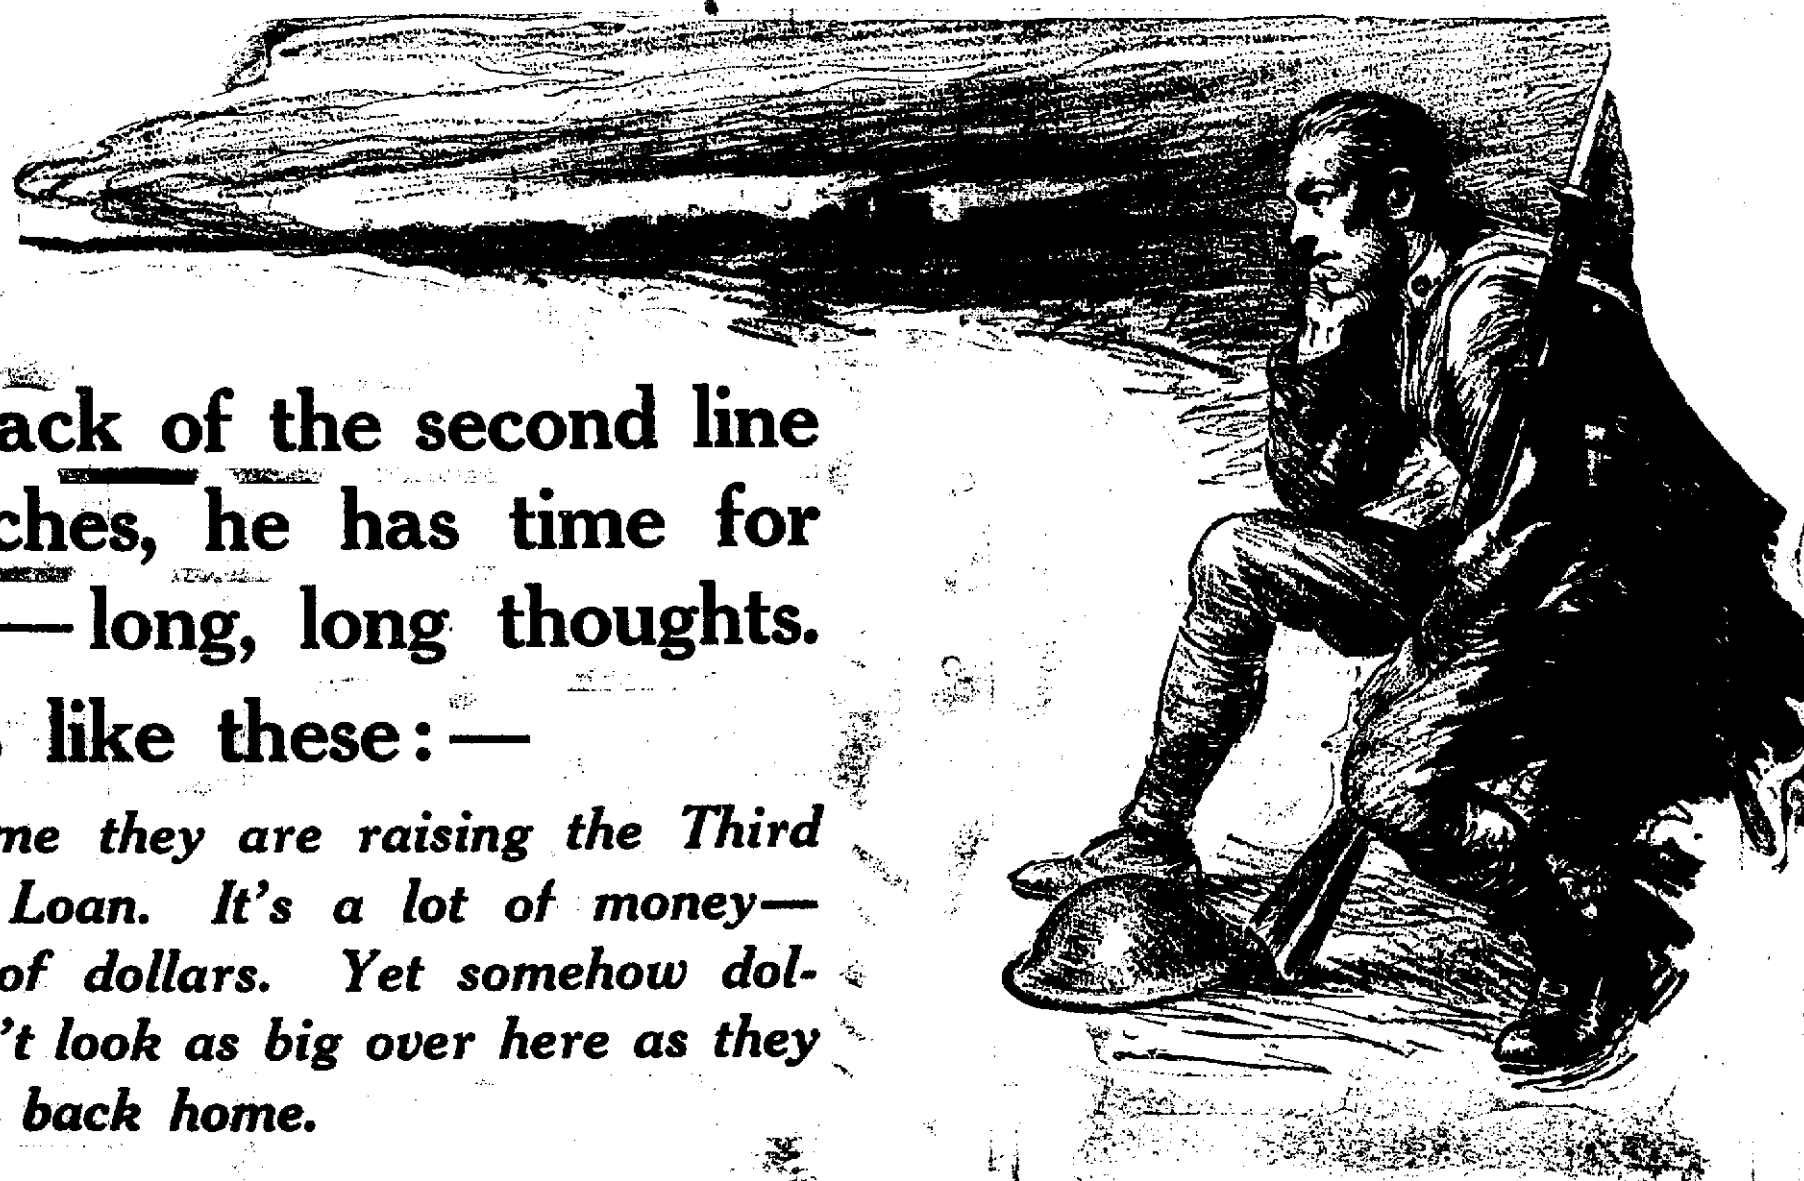

There were very few slackers among the women last night and in every case those remaining out of the parade had a "reasonable excuse." There were almost fourteen hundred persons participating and the magnificent Tyrone band and local Italian band furnished the music to inspire the marchers during their long drill. The parade was twenty-five minutes in passing a given point, with the result that the head of the procession made the route mentioned above and had to halt for some time at the court house until the rear ranks could go by. The first section composed of the mothers and wives of the boys in the ranks contained more than one hundred and sixty, and when these women who had made the supreme sacrifice marched proudly by, the head of every spectator was instantly bared and many bursts of applause greeted them, although the average man looked upon these heroic women in silence with heart too full of reverent awe for outward expression or demonstration of any kind. Many of the service flags carried by this group contained two stars, while several denoted the fact that the bearer had three sons in the service. This section was headed by a huge flag draped automobile carrying the children of those fathers in the army.

The Red Cross chapter, Navy League and other kindred organizations made fine showings while the inscriptions on the different banners carried in the procession were both witty and timely. An idea of the amount of work the ladies have done and are doing was given by the many different organizations represented.

The different schools made a fine showing as well. St. Francis was represented by a living flag and 200 High school girls carried small American flags.

The event was one long to be remembered and it was universally enjoyed.

JUST back of the second line trenches, he has time for thoughts—long, long thoughts. Thoughts like these:—

"At home they are raising the Third Liberty Loan. It's a lot of money—billions of dollars. Yet somehow dollars don't look as big over here as they used to, back home.

My idea of Big Things has changed!

Food and warm clothes, ships, guns, shells, medicine, bandages, ambulances, aeroplanes—Victory—they're the Big Things over here.

For we've got to carry on and end this hell—forever.

And this idea about the Big Things must get across to the folks at home.

They know we're out for Victory,—they won't fail us. Of course they'll buy Liberty Bonds!"

A million men, our husbands, our sons, our brothers, are thinking thoughts like these.

We must be worthy of their faith in us.
We must buy Liberty Bonds

"Second Line of Defense" A Virile Force in Bucking Up Sentiment for Activities of War

HERE MAN WAS OUTSHOWN

Well, Liberty Day has come and gone and every loyal, patriotic Clearfielder certainly has reason to be proud of the community in which he lives and the ladies (God bless them) of his community. The ladies of old Clearfield can always be depended upon in any crisis or in any movement for the public welfare as has been demonstrated times without number in the past, and will continue to be in the future as long as Clearfield exists. Last night's Liberty parade was a shining example of the steadfastness and loyalty of the women of the land. It was a living, moving, inspiring picture of the demonstration of American patriotism and love of liberty. In what other cause could you have secured such a turnout of women, yet how natural it was to find the women of Clearfield, who have already made so many sacrifices for the boys at the front, marching in serried ranks to attest outwardly and before the world their love of country and willingness to make even greater sacrifices for the success of the American boys "over there" and the final triumph of democracy and right.

Last night's demonstration was in the hands of the women exclusively and that those hands were energetic and capable was proven by the magnificent spectacle presented by the inspiring pageant as it passed down Second street to Broad, thence to Third and up Third to Market and to the High school auditorium where the speechmaking took place.

There were very few slackers among the women last night and in every case those remaining out of the parade had a "reasonable excuse." There were almost fourteen hundred persons participating and the magnificent Tyrone band and local Italian band furnished the music to inspire the marchers during their long drill. The parade was twenty-five minutes in passing a given point, with the result that the head of the procession made the route mentioned above and had to halt for some time at the court house until the rear ranks could go by. The first section composed of the mothers and wives of the boys in the ranks contained more than one hundred and sixty, and when these women who had made the supreme sacrifice marched proudly by, the head of every spectator was instantly bared and many bursts of applause greeted them, although the average man looked upon these heroic women in silence with heart too full of reverent awe for outward expression or demonstration of any kind. Many of the service flags carried by this group contained two stars, while several denoted the fact that the bearer had three sons in the service. This section was headed by a huge flag draped automobile carrying the children of those fathers in the army.

The Red Cross chapter, Navy League and other kindred organizations made fine showings while the inscriptions on the different banners carried in the procession were both witty and timely. An idea of the amount of work the ladies have done and are doing was given by the many different organizations represented.

The different schools made a fine showing as well. St. Francis was represented by a living flag and 200 High school girls carried small American flags.

The event was one long to be remembered and it was indeed a beautiful pageant.

SPARTAN WOMEN OF CLEARFIELD

No feature of the women's parade was more popular and timely than that in the first section where the mothers and wives of soldiers and sailors appeared. How proud they looked! What a sight! They are themselves! One would have known by their erect posture, their martial tread and their proud smile that they had a great deal more to march for than did the others. In columns of four, shoulder to shoulder, these brave sacrificing women marched just like the regular army, and some, no doubt were thinking that perhaps, their son or their husband was at that very moment, in like manner, marching to the relief of the British and the French in Flanders. No wonder they smiled as they marched along. What a grand fight their men are engaged in! The men are going to the defense of Belgian and French women now. They know that American women are safe. They have heard the call to universal manhood and being strong at heart they answered the call. Yes, perhaps there was a tear and a heaving breast, but underneath it all there was pride; the pride that is born of real admiration for a member of family has been noble and self-sacrificing. God bless the mothers and wives. Truly they are the strength of the men at the front. Showing such spirit the women of America are winning the war.

THE PERIL OF YPERS

The earliest report this morning showed the inevitable fall of Ypres as a result of the loss of Mt. Kemmel as recorded yesterday. Haig admits that the Allied line was driven back. With this threatening aspect there is a ray of joy in the fact that since yesterday's issue the honors of war have fallen to the Allies in the Amiens sector and the likelihood that Hangard will again become an Allied city.

The question, "Where is that army of 800,000 reserves?" is being asked on every hand in Clearfield this morning. Some even express doubt as to its existence. Our opinion is that the Allied reserve is a live potent force and that every statement of Koch, Pershing and Haig can be relied upon. None of these great commanders have any such record for a ruthless sacrifice of the blood of their men as do the German commanders. Humanitarian commanders are these gentlemen and they do not propose to sacrifice on the altar of death any more of their valorous men than they can help. They will not trade men for acres, unless those acres are necessary to the lives of other men. The Berlin report this morning shows that the French lost about six thousand in prisoners when they were surrounded on Mt. Kemmel. Better lose them as prisoners than as dead men. So far there are only a few hundred Americans on the actual firing line in the present engagement. Berlin reports 250,000 Americans on the ground but the casualty lists do not indicate that they are being used. While this continual dropping back of the Allies looks perilous and foolhardy it is bringing the crucial battle one step nearer. With Ypres in the hands of the enemy the advance must be stopped. Dunkirk is the next objective and Dunkirk must not fall.

It is significant that the British and the French are making public professions of their shortage of man power. This, if such is actually the case, would be dangerous information to give to Germany under the circumstances. Considering that the British nation is most non-committal in affairs of war it would look as though this claim is being thrown out as bait to draw the German on. Reports indicate that great sections of the German army are being brought from the Italian, Russian and French fronts. It all may be a monster plan to disorganize the German army as at present lined up in defensive position on all fronts, and then throw in the reserves for a last great battle.

MORE ARTICLES TAKEN FROM THE STARS AND STRIPES

The following "first line impressions" from the trenches in France, we take from "The Stars and Stripes," the official newspaper published by the American expeditionary force at Paris, France. The official and humorous poem were printed in the issue of April 5th:

THE SALVATION ARMY

Perhaps, in the old days when war and your home town seemed so far apart as Paris, France and Paris, Ill., you were a superior person who used to sneer when you passed a street corner where a small Salvation Army band was holding forth. Perhaps—Heaven forgive you—you even sneered a little when you heard the bespectacled sister in the poke bonnet bang her tambourine, and raise a shrill voice to the strains of "Oh, death, where is thy sting-alike." Probably—unless you yourself had known the bitterness of one who finds himself alone, hungry and homeless in a big city—you did not know much about the Salvation Army.

Well, we are all homeless, even here and every American soldier who took back with him a new affection and a new respect for the Salvation Army. Many will carry with them the memories of a cheering word and a friendly smile received in one of the huts nearest of all to the trenches. There the old slogan of "Soup and Salvation" has given way to "Pies and Piety." It might be "Doughnuts for Doughboys." These huts, pitched within the shock of the German guns, are ramshackle and bare and few, for no organization can grow rich on the pennies and nickels that are tossed into tambourines at the street corners of the world. But they are doing a work that the soldiers themselves will never forget, and it is an especial pleasure to say so here, because the Salvation Army, being much too simple and old-fashioned to know the uses of advertisement, have never asked us to. You however, can testify for them. Perhaps you do in your letters home. And surely when you are back there and you pass once more a "meeting" at the curb, you will not sneer. You will tarry a while—and take off your hat.

POLITICS PUT AWAY

Partisan politics, the dispatches from the states inform us, is now a thing of the past. The minority party in Congress no longer obstructs simply for the sake of obstructing, but constructs—constructs for the sake of obstructing Germany. The acid test applied to every measure that comes up it not, "Was it introduced by a Democrat, by a Republican, by a Progressive, by a Prohibitionist, by a Socialist, or by an Independent?" but the far simpler and saner one, "Will it, if passed help to win the war?"

That news is most encouraging to us over here, most heartening and refreshing. The first thing we realized when we landed here was that we would have plenty to do in fighting Germany without fighting among ourselves. We have stuck to the preparation for the former task and let the latter alone. And, with the people in the Saets behind us following the same plan of action all Potsdam can't stop us!

We had our days of red romance,
You're somewhere in Clearfield; I'm in France.
To still has never been my wont.
My way is blunt, my words are true.
Miss you? Don't you ever think I don't?
I do
I miss you, O my dear. And yet I still must suffer and be strong
Without you, Bessie. I shall get along

BEST IN THE LONG RUN

The Password for Tires

GOODRICH TESTED TIRES

There is no risk with the tire that can give the password "TESTED," for no weakness, no structural failing, could hide itself during the month to month, season to season, testing of the Test Car Fleets.

SILVERTOWN CORDS, and BLACK SAFETY TREADS, challenged America's roads, and under light and heavy cars fought sand, gravel, and rock, in rain, mud, snow, and slush, and defeated them. The spiral-wrapped, cable-core tire body stood staunch against the hammering of mountain trails. The close-clutch, cross-barred, non-skid black safety tread, baffled the teeth of desert and prairie paths.

Demand this password of all tires before you buy, and you will get the durability, dependability, and economy of the tires which the roads of every region of our land proclaim, "America's Tested Tires."

CELEBRATING ARIGHT

Not with drums and salvos of artillery and oratory are we, over here, celebrating the anniversary of America's entry into the war. We are celebrating it with a dedication of ourselves, through our Commander-in-Chief's offer to the High Command, "for all we have and are," to the great task of helping our Allies drive back the invader. We're going to be in it, and to put into it all we know how to put into it. That is celebrating aright.

A glorious privilege lies before us. It goes without saying that we will make the most of it. For our second year of the war there could be no more inspiring inception than this: An American Army, trained and eager, going forward in concert with the representatives of our two great sister-democracies, to meet the Hun upon the plains of Picardy. The eyes of the world are upon us. Forward—forward for the right! As it is written, so shall it be: "Where breathes the foe but falls before us, With Freedom's soul beneath our feet And Freedom's banner streaming o'er us?"

DRIVE AWAY HEADACHE

Rub Musterole on Forehead and Temples

A headache remedy without the dangers of "headache medicine." Relieves the ache and that miserable feeling from colds or congestion. And it acts at once! Musterole is a clean, white ointment, made with oil of mustard. Better than a mustard plaster and does not blister. Used only externally, and in no way can it affect stomach and heart, as some internal remedies do. Excellent for sore throat, bronchitis, croup, stiff neck, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, all pains and aches of the back or joints, sprains, sore muscles, bruises, chilblains, frost-bitten feet, colds of the chest (it often prevents pneumonia). 30c and 60c jars, hospital size $2.50

JOFFRE'S CONTRIBUTION

ris, April 27.—Marshal Joffre at generalissimo of the French army, and the hero of the Marne, is counted in Paris and, like so many great men, is not always appreciative of effusive compliments. Lady recently called up to him her album and asked for "Just one." Joffre hesitated, but when she declared that even one line would make her the happiest of women, he smiled and accepted the proffered album. At his wrist-watch, which he had just received, he looked at the time and then, with a look of perfect frenzy of excited expectation, he wrote: "Eleven-fifteen p. m."

ODD SUPERSTITIONS HAVE PLACES IN LIVES OF SOLDIERS

London, April 27.—Never before have the soldiers of the world's armies amused so large a number of superstitions, charms, mascots, and luck bringers, as in the present war. Superstitions having to do with the number 3 are the most widespread. The third of anything is fatal. Soldiers of all armies don't like their third leaves. Some refuse to go home on a third leave, for fear they will be killed upon returning.

The lighting of three cigarettes with the same match forms the basis for another very widespread superstition. One of the three soldiers is bound to be killed before many weeks are over, and even those who see the three-time sharing of the same match with the smokers in the hope of avoiding the ill luck. Men who know say the origin of this superstition is a religious one, and goes back to the lighting of the lamps in the churches of Greece.

The Americans have caught the habit of the British gunners in expectorating on their shells before firing them in battle. Most people think this is an amusing triviality; but, as a matter of fact, it is an act of sacrifice of very great antiquity. In the long, long ago, primitive folk considered that the saliva was part of the soul of the individual, and that to part with it in the act of spitting was tantamount to making sacrifice, and this not only as an act of propitiation, but also as a thankoffering. The survivors of this remarkable form of sacrifice are far more numerous than is generally thought.

A good many minor superstitions are also encountered among the armies at the front. Until this war all odd numbers, except thirteen, were supposed to be lucky, especially seven and nine. Now, however, all odd numbers are considered unlucky, so unlucky that thirteen has no longer any distinction.

Friday is no longer an unlucky day, but Sunday is considered a very lucky day on which to go into battle. White heather tucked away in the band of the cap saves the wearer from a fatal wound.

There is a strong feeling of fatalism among the soldiers of all armies. There is a feeling that if the bullet is not made for you, you will come through all right. A French soldier was heard to tell that he knew he would come through all right, for when he first went in, a shrapnel shell burst in front of him at the Marne, and a large piece of it came down at his feet. He picked it up, and found his initial on it.

I. W. W. MAN READY FOR TRIAL

WILLIAM O. MAYWOOD.

This photograph of William D. Maywood, general secretary-treasurer of the Industrial Workers of the World, was taken just before his trial in Chicago was called. With others he is charged with conspiracy.

"It was my piece of shrapnel 'all right,'" he said, "and if it didn't get me, none other can." And, in fact, he has been through the thick of a number of battles since then, but he has never been wounded.

A certain British battalion regards the Military Cross as an omen of ill-luck, and view with alarm any recommendation to bestow the Military Cross on any member. Whether officers or men, all winners of the military Cross in the battalion have been killed in action.

The black cat is an omen of the greatest good luck in all armies. To hear the cackoo calling before breakfast is, in the armies of the Allies, a sign of bad luck.

The submarine warfare has renewed the demand for cauls as a charm against loss of life at sea. A caul is the membrane which sometimes encloses the head of a new-born infant, and from quite remote times it has been regarded as a luck-bringer, and an infallible amulet against death by drowning.

At many places round the docks in the great European ports one can see the little signs, "A Child's Caul for Sale," and fancy figures are demanded for them.

Among the many Philadelphia admirers of Grover Cleveland Alexander none will regret the absence of Alex from the Philly lineup more than the Philly pitchers. The Phil pitchers will lead a terrible life this season.

WHAT THE ONLOOKER SAW

Even though the weatherman may have been in league with the Hun in trying to dampen the ardor of the women (God bless 'em) he was out-leagued, outwitted, circumvented and otherwise put to rout last night when nearly one thousand and four hundred of Clearfield's second line of defense rallied to the sound of the tocsin and through an almost steady drizzle marched over our streets to do honor to the boys who have gone to the trench and camp to make this world a fit and better place to live in.

Early in the afternoon the clouds began to gather and a light rain started in but about six o'clock the sky broke for the time being and allowed the parade to form without the discomfort of having to form in the rain.

Contrary to general opinion, when it became known that the women were to have charge of the affair, the various divisions were marshalled into line at their respective starting places and the parade started on time—almost.

The wives' and mothers' division formed at the junction of Second and Front streets and what a division it was! There wasn't a woman there that went in a spirit other than pride in that she had one, two or three sons or that she had the breastwinner of the family in the service and they weren't downhearted; they were not the weary sort; they were there to do honor to the absent ones and if need be still make greater sacrifices in order that our homes and our free institutions might continue in the way that our forefathers intended that they should.

As soon as the signal came for the parade to start the mammoth service flag with its one, two or three stars on the field of white headed the division and, each with her own service flag with its one, two or three stars started to march to the stirring music of the band.

And the ovation they received! They no sooner started than the other sections of marchers through which the wives and mothers had to pass to reach the place of honor in the parade, started a fusillade of hand-clapping that increased in intensity as the body of women moved along through an avenue of men with bare heads, the lined Second street from the point down to the Nichols street bridge.

And they were brave marchers, too. Many were the mothers that marched with steps that, at times, faltered just a little over the uneven surface of the streets but they were brave and when the steady drizzle started scorned the proffered umbrellas or the suggestions that they drop out of the line of march.

By the time the head of the parade had reached the corner of Market and Second streets where the crowd of onlookers was the densest, the hand clapping and shouts arose to almost a furious hurricane of noise and then, as if the solemnity of the occasion overcame the tendency of the crowd to applaud, a hush spread over the throng and every male head, from men, who will soon be gathered to the bosom of their Father, down to the little boisterous chaps who are just learning what real patriotism means, was bared to the rain as the wives and mothers who had borne sons who are making this world safe for little children, passed through the most respectful, the most reverent, and one of the greatest stirred assemblages that has ever been gathered together in this city since its foundation.

All along the line of march as these wonderful women passed through the avenue of bared heads, the applause died out as the feeling of men who have long since forgotten what a great big lump in their throat means, got the better of them and a reverent hush overcame the tendency to vent their spirits in noise.

It is questionable whether any other town of Clearfield's size in the commonwealth could produce such an outpouring of patriotism. All religious lines were broken down; caste was forgotten; mistress and maid marched side by side; all doing honor to the boys who have gone out of our homes at the call of duty to defend those homes from the ravages of the beast.

Another of the features of the parade was an automobile full of little kiddies whose fathers were either "over there" or in camp. This was another of the manifestations of the sacrifices that are being made in our city for, ere long, these kiddies may be fatherless but most assuredly not friendless for many will be the helping hand held out to them if their Daddies make the supreme sacrifice.

It wasn't a downhearted line of marchers. There was a tear or two to be sure, but it was a thrilled procession; an outpouring of women who are lined up with their husbands and sons, giving them the whole hearted support and sympathy that they need in these times when they are going out on the shell torn fields of Flanders, possibly to make the greatest sacrifice of all, so that little children and women may be safe from the dastardly ravages of the war-crazed Hun.

Were they downhearted? NO—just determined!

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder troubles you.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys; they become over-worked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithium and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness. Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

WOMEN'S PARADE A BEAUTIFUL PAGEANT

sally styled the very best parade ever seen in Clearfield.

The military touch was artistically given the pageant by just four boys in khaki in the lineup. George Torrence at the head of the procession carrying Old Glory was a living embodiment of what the world is learning the American army to be, a big, husky, clean-lined, strength-denoting force, needing but the opportunity to demonstrate the power within it. The other color bearers, typical American soldiers, were Lawrence Dorr, Fred Lippart and Wallace Nagle.

When the parade reached the High school building, the Tyrone band was located at the east end of the Market street bridge and the paraders and selected choir massed on the bridge approach for the singing of America. When the band broke forth in the well known strains of the National hymn the assemblage under the direction of Prof. Van Oosten took up the song and rendered it with a spirit which denoted the pent up patriotism in every breast. It was a fitting finale to a moving display.

It was an occasion long to be remembered and talked about in Clearfield, and will redound to the boys "over there" what they already know, that there is no question about the morale of the people back home.

The crowd then filed into the High school auditorium to listen to patriotic addresses by John J. Washington Logan, of Philadelphia, and Samuel B. Hare, Esq., of Altoona.

A. M. Liveright, Esq., acted as chairman of the meeting. Rev. Dr. E. C. Reeve made the opening prayer.

Chairman Liveright then introduced Mr. Logan who is rated as one of the most finishing orators in Pennsylvania. His address was intensely interesting and instructive and his patriotic eloquence was heartily received. Mr. Hare's effort was equally inspiring and this part of the program was thoroughly interesting and instructive and his patriotic eloquence was heartily received.

Mrs. E. C. Reeve's rendering of "The March Song" and the singing by the male quartette, composed of Messrs Van Oosten, Nightingale, Taylor and James, were highly creditable efforts and received much well merited applause.

JUST back of the second line trenches, he has time for thoughts—long, long thoughts. Thoughts like these:—

“At home they are raising the Third Liberty Loan. It’s a lot of money—billions of dollars. Yet somehow dollars don’t look as big over here as they used to, back home.

My idea of Big Things has changed!

Food and warm clothes, ships, guns, shells, medicine, bandages, ambulances, aeroplanes—Victory—they’re the Big Things over here.

For we’ve got to carry on and end this hell—forever.

And this idea about the Big Things must get across to the folks at home.

They know we’re out for Victory,—they won’t fail us. Of course they’ll buy Liberty Bonds!”

A million men, our husbands, our sons, our brothers, are thinking thoughts like these.

We must be worthy of their faith in us.
We must buy Liberty Bonds

THE COST OF EQUIPPING A DIVISION.

According to a federal estimate, $4,387,880 is required to provide the initial cost of the clothing, fighting equipment and the eating utensils of a single division of infantry.

Translated into terms of Liberty Bonds, this means 87,758 persons have to buy one $50 bond apiece.

To feed this same division during a year's period of training it cost $3,577,000. It would take at least 71,540 buyers of $50 Liberty Bonds to provide the food.

If you happen to be one of the buyers of a $50 bond you can thus feel that your money has done its full duty in helping to maintain a division of our fighters against Kaiserism.

BADGE FOR LIBERTY LOAN WORKERS

The accompanying illustration shows the badge that has been prepared for distribution among volunteer workers for the Third Liberty Loan. The badge is in colors, and, judging from the wide demand for the Volunteer Liberty Loan Buttons for the Second Campaign, there will be an equally great demand for the new ones.

EDITORIAL.

YOUR DUTY TO YOUR NEIGHBORS.

Within sight of the writer sits a sunny haired girl bent over a typewriter. Her husband is in France. She does not know, but she suspects no doubt, that he is one of that grim dust-covered column which for some days now has filled a road leading to Picardy; stalwart men, straight backed, eyes front, marching into hell. If you hear a similar relation to the inferno along the Somme you will divine her state of mind. If you don't you can use your imagination.

She is your neighbor and countrywoman. You have other neighbors, hundreds of thousands of them, each wondering about a boy in Picardy, each striving to picture him in heroism or in agony, each tortured with dread of the next moment and the telegram it may bring. Sympathy won't help them; they don't want it; they can't use it. They ask only that you bear your share, to the limit of your capacity, as they are bearing theirs in this tragic conflict, which is our national glory.

The way is wide open for you. The country is appealing for subscriptions to the Third Liberty Loan in support of the sons and brothers and husbands of your neighbors who are reddening with their life's blood the mud holes of the Somme. In the name of everything you hold sacred be neighborly. Put in your last dollar.

THE MAN WHO BOMBED KRUPPS

CLUBWOMEN AT HOT SPRINGS

Hot Springs, Ark., April 27.—Arriving trains today brought hundreds of delegates to the fourteenth biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, which is to hold forth here during the coming week. The convention promises to be the largest and most interesting gathering of women ever held in this country. Politics and other matters which have featured the previous gatherings of the Federation will have but a minor place on the program of this year's gathering. The convention, on the contrary, will be a gigantic war service conference, and every subject considered will be presented in its relation to the national crisis.

PAIGE
The Most Beautiful Car in America

Help The Freight Situation

There is a tremendous movement of freight on the railroads. War supplies are being transported in such vast quantities that congestion is bound to develop at terminal points.

Therefore, the Government has earnestly requested the public to postpone all "unnecessary traveling." It has said in very plain terms—"Please keep off the railroads."

By all means observe this request. Buy a reliable motor car—just such a car as the Paige, for instance—and use it, not only for side trips, but those longer journeys as well. Encourage the Touring Movement. It will help Uncle Sam and afford healthful relaxation for you and every member of your family.

SUNDAY SCHOOL

Lesson 4.—Second Quarter,
April 28, 1918.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES

Text of Lesson, Mark 9:30-50.—Memory
Verse, 1 John 4:21.—Golden Text,
Mark 9:35.—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

Reportedly Christ told them that he should suffer and be killed, and rise again the third day (vs. 30-32), but I know of no one who believed it except Mary of Bethany. They had other thoughts than his and therefore could not receive his words. This is no doubt the reason why so many today cannot receive the teaching concerning his coming again to set up his kingdom on this earth. They have their own thoughts concerning the kingdom being within us, and that we are here to win the world to Christ, and other traditions whereby the word of God is made void, and they know not the thoughts of the Lord. Paul says, by the spirit, that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the Scriptures (1 Cor. 15:3-4), meaning the writings, in the Old Testament, in type, and in plain statement, in Gen. 22; Ex. 11; Lev. 16; Ps. 22; Isa. 53; and elsewhere. It might be said to many today, as well as to those in his day, "Ye know not the Scriptures, nor the power of God."

Faith and ambition were among the sins of the disciples, then as now, for as they journeyed they had been disputing as to who should be the greatest (vs. 33-37). By a little child whom he took in his arms, and set in the midst of them, he taught them the great lesson of lowliness and humility. When, on the last night of his life, there was a strife among them as to who should be the greatest, he called their attention to the fact that he was among them as one who served (Lu. 22:24-27). Ambition to be somewhat is from the devil who told Eve that if she obeyed him she would be as God, and this was his own sin (Gen. 3:5; Isa. 14:13, 14). Jeremiah's advice to his scribe Euzrah was good, "Seekest thou great things for thyself? Seek them not." (Jer. 45:5). We need to remember that "God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble," and to consider him who though he was rich, for our sakes became poor. (1 Pet. 5:7; 2 Cor. 8:9).

According to the harmony of the Gospels, the incident of the "Hot Water Drinking" recorded only in Mark 17:25-27, comes in before this of the little child. In this matter also there was a bit of pride on the part of Peter, for when asked if his master would sit at the head of the table, he answered, "I have asked Jesus, instead of answering as if he was an authority and knew it all. Our Lord, rather than give offense, submitted to paying what Peter had put him into, but he did not draw upon the treasurer. Perhaps the treasury was empty. This mode of obtaining money to pay this bill is to me as wonderful, if not more so, than the fish story to Jonah."

The lesson incident of vs. 38-41, indicates another bit of self-importance, though it seemed like zeal for the Lord, and jealousy for his cause. How common the word is now, or something similar to it. "He followeth not us," and the same spirit is all too manifest. Let us forbid him, or disapprove of him, or talk him down, because he does not see as we do, or fellowship with us. Oh, to have more of his spirit who said, "Forbid him not, for he that is not against us is on our part." What surprises there will be when he who judgeth righteously shall reward every one according to his work, and not even a cup of cold water given in his name shall have lost its reward.

The remaining verses of our lesson chapter (42-50) are among the most awful on record, and three times he mentions Hell, and the fire that never shall be quenched. He alone knows what it means and he does not want us to know, for he is not willing that any should perish. It was not prepared for us, but for the devil and his angels (Matt. 25:41), but wherever it is and whatever it is, it must be awfully real. Perishing must be an indescribably fearful thing for "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." When we try to think what it must have meant to him to give up his Son to suffer in our stead, and what it must have meant to his Son to give up the glory which he had with the Father before the world was, and to sojourn about thirty-four years in a mortal body, as a poor man, in a world which he had made, but which would not own him nor receive him; despised and rejected of men, a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief, wounded for our transgressions, bruised for our iniquities, bearing our sins in his own body, all that we might not perish—then we must conclude that to perish must be a truly awful thing. The reality of the torment of the lost may be better imagined from the description in Rev. 14:10, 11, and yet there are those who say there is no hell, thus making light of the love of God and the anguish of Gethsemane, and Calvary, and making God a liar.

If we think continually of God's goodness and his never-failing mercies, we shall experience such happiness that distrust and discord will fade away.

LUDENDORFF IN INTERVIEW WITH NEWSPAPERMAN

By Henry Wood

(United Press Staff Correspondent)
With The French Armies, March 21.—Copies of the Frankfurter Zeitung have just reached the French front containing a joint interview granted by Hindenburg and Ludendorff in honor of having forced Russia to sign peace.

Whilst loudly exonerating Prussian militarism from all blame for the Russian catastrophe, the two German generals in precisely the same breath thought of peace with a similar fate unless she also makes peace. Extracts from the interview, preceded by an explanation by the journalist who secured it, are as follows:

"We have been able to interview Field Marshal Hindenburg. He has ascertained, that thanks to the signing of peace on the east the blockade of our enemies is now broken.

"It is to the excellent moral of the German soldier that we owe this success. It is necessary that we think of that and repeat it without cessation. I owe that to my soldiers," said Hindenburg.

"We then asked the marshal if he thought we had acted with too much violence in the east.

"War is not a sweet joke," he replied. "The Russians knew it as well as we did; we were simply obliged to show the greatest energy. It was absolutely necessary to see to it that the ravages of eastern Prussia should never be allowed to take place again. The frontier of this province must be guaranteed against any new aggression."

"Russia is now completely reduced to impotence; we have made peace with the various portions of the old empire. We concluded a rapid peace, and that was what we wanted was it not? What was there to be gained by waiting? Could we have permitted the various portions of Russia tranquilly to reunite; themselves again?"

"General Ludendorff made the following declaration:

"We have every desire to live loyally in peace with Russia. We hope that order will soon re-establish itself there. We are not the cause of the woes from which Russia is now suffering. It was the interior situation of the country that provoked the ruin and the crisis that is now shaking it. A treaty of peace of the kind that we signed with Ukraine, and Finland could not have been concluded with the Grand Russia. An unequivocal solution was necessary. How was it to bring this about except by force when all other means had failed?"

"Peace and the assurance of its maintenance in the east will have for its effect to disengage our western front. Our superiority which rested solely on our moral force is now numerically appreciable, even if our effectives are hardly larger than those of the enemy. The re-enforcement of our western front has been a long and minutely done work. The transportation of troops requires a long time, which is something that must not be forgotten."

"We are not obliged to ask ourselves now where the enemy will attack us. We can attack instead wherever and whenever we wish."

"The hard epoch of 1917 during which we engaged offensives in the east and in Italy at the expense of our western front has now passed forever. The French in the meantime are digging their own grave. France is pouring out in great streams the blood of her soldiers. If the French had treated our prisoners more humanely one might be able to respect them and have pity for them."

"They have already directly expiated the fault which their passions caused them to commit and have already paid dearly their desire to reconquer Alsace-Lorraine—a desire inspired by their wounded vanity."

"The state of slavery in which they find themselves now in connection with England will decide for all time to come the fate of France as a great power. Added to that, the population of France continues to diminish. We only hope that such a fate will be spared us."

"But now we have confidence in the help of God and desire only a stable peace full of honor."

The English town of Reading, from which the British commissioner in America takes his title, is a place that has figured more or less prominently in history since the invading Danish hosts first pitched their camp there. The town lies on the road from London to Bath, and in the old coaching days was an important centre.

The Better Way—S. S.

Nine centuries ago some soldiers of Modena stole a bucket as a joke from a public well at Bologna. When they refused to restore it, acrimony commenced between the soldiers of the rival States, and a war ensued, which spread until it involved the greater part of Europe.

As was to be expected, Manager Besdek of the Pirates has gathered what appears to be a right smart ball team. It was admitted that Besdek knew nothing of baseball when he came into the big show.

Furor Teutonicus

By Ernest F. Seddington.

Another (German) correspondent says the undoubted bravery of the Americans proved no match for the "Furor Teutonicus"—Cable dispatch.

They've bombed us, they've gassed us,
They've used liquid fire,
They've done all they could to fright us;
They've abused us, they've cursed us,
They've called down God's ire,
Yet they think we fear "Furor Teutonicus."

They've fled in us, aped on us,
Blown up our ships,
They've incited our neighbors to fight us;
They've laughed at us, sneered at us,
Scorned on their lips,
Now they drag out old "Furor Teutonicus."

Come our soldiers' reply to us:
"You can rely on us,
Buy Bonds and leave it to us;
We know they are bluffing,
We'll knock out the stuffing
Of Old Hogeny 'Furor Teutonicus!'"

The American spirit which prompts our people to give and give until it hurts, and to lend their money to their Government to the limit of their ability to do so, proves that selfishness is no longer a power in the hearts and minds of the Nation.
